Partnership Review

The Department of Health and Social Care (England) have published their GP Partnership review report. The review was independently chaired by Dr Nigel Watson in collaboration with NHS England, GPC and RCGP. CLMC contributed to this report through the CLMB Board, attendance at meetings and comments from local practices. We, alongside the GPC, welcome this report which addresses the issues of risk, workload, workforce and status in the system, and identifies the major problems as being about resources, implementation and delivery.

The Department of Health and Social Care has published their DDR B evidence for 2018-19, which can be accessed here.

The BMA have also submitted their evidence and published a statement which stated: “Many doctors are on the brink of breaking point with low levels of moral and plans to retire early. Since 2008 our members have experienced a real-terms pay cut of up to 30%. Many doctors are now on the brink of breaking point with low levels of morale and plans to retire early. To avert this crisis the Government and DDR B must recognise the value of doctors”.

The GPC has published a summary for primary care of the ‘EU Exit operational readiness guidance’ which is now available on the BMA website. Further information about the BMA position on Brexit is available here.

New NHS Jobs Process and Pilot Practices Wanted

NHS Jobs are using the end of contract in 2020 to transform and re-design the current website for recruiters and candidates. They have completed their research and discovery phase and are currently testing prototypes. In spring / summer this year they would like to find GP practices to partner with them (basic info available below) to test the pilot site. Partners would be given a gold service of support and training for any vacancies they post as well as the opportunity to influence and shape the future service.

Have You Retrained as a GP

In their continuing efforts to increase the annual intake of new GP trainees, Health Education England is looking for a number of volunteers (in England) from trainees across all other medical specialities, consultants, trust and staff grade doctors who would be willing to share their experience (case study) to help inform other doctors about the merits of training for a career in general practice. They have some examples but, having proved so popular, they need some more.

HEE are requesting a short case study, with an accompanying photo, and consent to promote it on the GP National Recruitment Office website and through social media. If you are interested and would like to help, please email gprecruitment@hee.nhs.uk for guidance and more information.
