PRIVACY NOTICE FOR CHILDREN

This explains why Westover Surgery collects information about you, how we keep it safe and private, and how we may use that information.

Why do we collect information about you?

Doctors and nurses have to keep a record about your health and any treatment that we give you. This is called your “medical record” and helps us to really look after you.

Your medical record is only used to help doctors and nurses keep you well – and make you better when you are not so well.

What do we record?

We keep a record of every time that you see someone at the surgery, as well as times that you have been seen somewhere else, such as in the Accident and Emergency department of a hospital.

We keep a record of:

- Your name, address and information about those looking after you (such as your mum or dad)
- Your home telephone number and mobile number (if you have one), and your email address if you want us to
- Details of the times that you saw a doctor or nurse, here at the surgery and at other places
- Any tests that you have had (such as an x-ray)

How we keep your information safe and private

Your medical record is kept on a really secure computer system. Only doctors, nurses and receptionists that we give permission to can look at your information. No-one else.

And it is really, really difficult to hack into that system. We make sure of that.

If you are old enough to have a mobile phone, or an email address, then we will only use that to contact you when it’s about “medical stuff” – like reminding you about an appointment that you might have to see your doctor at the surgery. If you don’t want us to text you anything at all, then just tell us and we will make sure that doesn’t happen.

All your info is private and we won’t tell anyone else about it unless they are also looking after you, or trying to get you better, and only if they really need to know about it.

So, at the surgery, the doctors, nurses and receptionists can look at your medical record if they need to. And if they do, they are not allowed to tell anyone else about it.

Sharing your information

If the doctors and nurses at the surgery don't know what's wrong with you, we will ask someone at the hospital to see you – and we will give that doctor or nurse information about you and what's making you feel unwell.

But sometimes we have to tell other people about stuff in your medical records. Sometimes it's because "it's the law" and we will get into trouble if we don't. So if a judge tells us to, then we will have to give them information about you. If the police tell us to, then sometimes we have to tell them as well.

If you're ill and that illness could be spread to all your friends and classmates, then we might need to let the right people know – so that they can try to make sure that no-one else catches that illness too.

Sometimes we have to tell other people if we are worried that you, or someone else in your family, could be in danger.

Whenever we can, we would always tell you if we were going to tell someone else about your medical record.

Some other medical places, such as the A&E department at our local hospital, or other doctors and nurses that you might see when the surgery is closed, can take a peek at your medical record but only if they ask you (or your mum, dad or legal guardian first). The information in your medical record could be very helpful to them when they are trying to make you better.

You don't have to say yes if they ask you, and you can ask the surgery not to allow anyone else to be even able to look at your medical record like this if you want.

Other computers

The doctors and nurses at the surgery can also look at some of your hospital records – for example if you went to A&E with a broken arm, we can then see what the x-ray showed. That information can be very useful to us when we see you in the surgery ourselves.

Any questions?

If you have any questions, then please do ask someone at the surgery. Or you, (or your mum or dad) could ask the doctor who is in charge of all of this 'data' stuff and 'keeping things private'.
