Schools & Colleges

Accessing support through your school and college is a great way for you to get help when you need it. Your school or college should have a pastoral worker, mentor or counsellor who you can talk to about issues around your caring role. Sometimes it helps for your school to know about the situation you are in, as they can often put support in place to make sure you are well supported and that your teachers or tutors know that at times you might have a lot on your mind.

One young carer said,

'College look out for me as I struggle with stress at college and at home, they ensure that I am catching up on coursework and not missing out on opportunities, it helps me to keep an eye on my mental health and know that there is support around me from them.'

Speak to a member of staff at your school or college to find out how you could be supported as a Young Carer.

Advocacy

Advocacy is support which can be used to make sure your wishes and views are heard, especially when decisions affecting your future are being made. An advocate will listen to you and act on your wishes, without judgment. An advocate should never advise, but support you to make informed decisions, (these are decisions where you know all of the information, both positive and negative and then make your decision based on this). Below are some organisations that you or your family can contact when you feel that you need support to have your voice heard:

National Youth Advocacy Service, offer support to young people who are experiencing a range of difficulties, including support for those who are on either a Child In Need Plan (CIN) or a Child Protection plan and those who are in care. However, they may be able to help you if you ring them
